this is why i would personally favor that law.

three more controllable factors are how finely the beans are ground before coffee making and the method and length of time used for brewing the coffee.